HE BOUGHT FIVERS.

How Mrs. Loveydovey's Castle in the Air Collapsed.

"Dearie," said Mrs. Loveydovey, looking up from the woman's page, "I have just read an account of a man who gave up smoking 25-cent cigars and was able, in consequence, to buy his wife the handsomest sealskin to be had. It was frightfully interesting."

"Was it?" inquired Mr. Loveydovey lazily, opening one eye. "In what way was it interesting?"

"Oh (petulantly), don't be so stupid! It was interesting because she—er—got the sealskin."

"That so?" yawned Mr. Loveydovey. And he closed an eye again. "Dearie!" ejaculated Mrs. Loveydovey in another minute or two. "Now I know you're not asleep. Listen to me. You smoke 25-cent cigars, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, sometimes."

"Frequently, don't you?"

"Well, yes, frequently."

"Then just think!" said Mrs. Loveydovey blithely. "If you gave up smoking them you could buy me a sealskin."

"I'm afraid not, my dear."

"Oh, nonsense. How many do you smoke a day?"

"Sometimes one, sometimes two, sometimes three, sometimes four. It depends."

"Four a day," said Mrs. Loveydovey conclusively. "Think of that. That is a dollar a day. Why, in less than a year you would have saved over $300. That would buy me a beauty. Now, dearie, I want you to start in right away, and—"

"The fact is, my dear," interrupted Mr. Loveydovey, opening both his eyes this time, "—"

"You can't argue it out with me, Mr. L."

"Perhaps not. But as I was going to say, the only time I ever smoke 25-cent cigars is—"

He bit the end off a choice perfecto as he spoke—"when they are given to me."

A good story is told on a rather nervous young lady of Illinois. The other day she was at a crossing near the passenger depot while the trainmen were doing some switching. As the train backed up one brakeman yelled to the other: "Jump into her as she comes by, run her down behind the coal chute and cut her in two and bring the head end up to the depot." It is said that the young lady jumped up and down and yelled as loud as she could.

The Kind the People need in Order to Restore and Preserve Health.

The acknowledged king of medicines in the world to-day is Paine's Celery Compound.

Its marvellous cures during the month of January made up a record far surpassing the work of any previous month in the past years. Hundreds of letters were sent in by saved men and women who were truly plucked from the grave and saved to anxious relatives and friends. In thankful, burning words the young and old admitted that without Paine's Celery Compound their cases would have been quite hopeless.

Surely, poor sufferer, this is sufficient proof that Paine's Celery Compound is able to meet your case, even though it be serious and desperate—able to give you the new life you so much desire. Try it once; a bottle or two will work wonders.

article we would be inclined to the opinion that not only the salvation of Tweed but the whole picturesque Bay of Quinte district depended upon the extension of the Bay of Quinte Railway north through Actinolite, Queensboro and Bannockburn when it would tap the C. O. R. From there it could be pushed, to quote the News.

"Through Haliburton county into Nipissing district, tapping the new Ottawa & Parry Sound R. R. they would in time extend their road through Nipissing and terminate at either North Bay or Sudbury, passing right through the very heart of the finest timber limits in Ontario and right through the very heart of the richest mineral sections in the province."

But this is not all. "Another and prominent feature," says the News: "Of such a road is the fact that in time it would become the leading connection with the great metropolis of America, New York. It would run almost in a straight line from North Bay to Kingston, where it would connect with the New York Central, providing the quickest and shortest route to this great metropolis, fully 200 miles shorter than any possible route."

All that the News urges the citizens of Tweed to do in aiding on this glorious consummation is to grant the B. of Q. the right of way through two streets in the village. This the obturate citizens have so far refused to accede to. The News points out the danger of dilly-dallying with this matter. It says:

"It is not a matter to be trifled with, but one that requires prompt and immediate action. Shall we stand in our own light — stagnate and die by inches, or shall we awaken to our surroundings, reach out for more trade and business and become a prosperous and great people."

Our advice to the good people of Tweed is to reach out and help themselves by all means. The News thinks that the promotion of this road would be of great value to Napanee. It says:

"Napanee would also gain the advantages of being connected with such a vast and wealthy country, which would have a ten

The Poor & Sanitary Committee reported and expenditure of $28 since last meeting. Mr. Fred Hooper appeared before the council as to the advisability of the Poor and Sanitary Committee uniting with the various charitable societies in town in the distribution of charity. Mr. Hooper informed the council that at a representative meeting held in the council chamber recently a resolution was passed to the effect that the distribution and management of all charity be vested in a board of managers composed of the clergymen of the town, the Mayor and Chairman of the Poor and Sanitary Committee and a committee of six ladies from each of the churches in town. It was proposed that the town council pay into this fund the money set aside for charity. After considerable discussion the matter was referred to the Poor and Sanitary Committee to investigate and report.

It was moved and carried that all reports of committees must be made in writing and signed by at least two members of the committee in future.

On motion $30 was placed at the disposal of the Poor and Sanitary Committee.

On motion $25 was placed in the hands of the chief of police for snow shovelling. On motion the Mayor was requested to call a public meeting of citizens to discuss the Indian Relief Fund.

On motion the collector was instructed to collect the balance of uncollected taxes. On motion the treasurer was instructed to sell all lands three years in arrears for taxes.

A RADICAL CHANGE.

A Hamilton Lady Undergoes an Experience and Relates the History of a Severe Trial.

Mrs. James Graham, 280 James street north, Hamilton, wife of the well-known grocer at that address, relates the following circumstances. Mr. and Mrs. Graham have resided in Hamilton for the past fourteen years, and are very well and favorably known.

Mrs. Graham says: "During the six months prior to taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I had a serious trouble arising from wrong action of the heart and nerves. One of the symptoms was that I could not lie on my left side, for it did so my heart throbbed so violently as to give me great pain. The smallest noise or the slightest exertion would start my heart palpitating terribly. It was impossible for me to go up a short flight of stairs without stopping to rest and regain my breath. I was excessively nervous, and my limbs would tremble as if with ague. My hands and feet were unnaturally cold, and I suffered sharp pains in the back of my head. The slamming of a door would nearly set me wild. Frequently I would wake up frightened, and then was unable to get to sleep again. I lost flesh, and became very weak and despondent. I felt miserable in mind and body.

"For six months I have been constantly taking medicine, trusting that it would help me, and for a time was under the care of a physician, but all the efforts I made towards a cure were of no avail. My physician finally told my husband: 'You know there is no cure for heart disease,' which made me more despondent than ever.

"Six weeks ago I was induced to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and from that time my restoration to health dates. I have taken four boxes, which I bought at John A. Barr's drug store, corner James and Merrick streets. These pills are the only medicine that has done me any good or given me relief. I am happy to say that they proved that the doctor was mistaken in saying that heart disease could not be cured. Since I commenced taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I have been daily getting better. I can now go upstairs without trouble and attend my daily duties without the slightest distress. I have gained in flesh, in health and in strength. My blood is healthy and circulates freely. Lying on my left side causes me no inconvenience or pain, and I enjoy health and restful sleep. My nerves are strong and vigorous, and there has been such a radical change for the better in my condition that I can say these wonderful pills have practically made a complete cure.

"I can recommend them without the slightest hesitation to all sufferers from similar complaints. (Signed) Mrs. Jas. Graham, Hamilton, Ont."

HAD PROVED ITS VALUE.

Shrewd Old Money-maker Found He Had Met a Dangerous Rival.

Here is a millionaire story, which am I assured is absolutely correct, says a writer in Pick-Me-Up. A well-known Jew financier, was walking down Regent-street the other day when he was accosted by a beggar, who is a more or less familiar feature to that thoroughfare. Instead of turning a deaf ear to the man's supplications and getting off as quick as he could, as some people might have done, the millionaire at once stopped and proceeded to ply the man with questions as to why he didn't try to get work instead of begging, whether he had a wife and children to support, and so on.

The beggar, who was aware of the identity of the man talking to him, and thought he might be in for a really good thing, poured out the usual story of his woes into the millionaire's ears—whether true or no is not, for the moment, of consequence.

The millionaire continued to listen attentively, and the beggar's hopes of bringing off a "scoop" rose higher and higher. Then the millionaire put his final question, "How long have you been begging?" he said, squarely.

"Over twenty years, kind gentleman," was the reply.

"Ah," said the millionaire, reflectively, "it's not at all a bad trade." Then he walked on, and a nonconformist journalist, who happened to come by just then, went home and wrote an impassioned article on "The Iniquity of Bad Language in the West End Streets."

Up in the Air.

"It's curious," said the man who was relating his experience to a Detroit Free Press writer, "how luck will go back on you when you least expect it. Last year I bought a fruit farm in the central part of the state, and expected to have a splendid crop. Well, about April along came a frost, and I sat up nights with that orchard."

"What became of the fruit?"

"Blasted,"

He ruminated a spell, then broke out again:

"This year that orchard hangs full of fruit, but I'm not in it. I sold it to buy my girl a diamond ring. Oh, the hopes I had that I would be able to settle down and make a home. Where are those hopes now?"

"What happened to them?"

"Blasted."

He wiped some dust out of his eyes and ruminated again. Presently he asked:

"Any of you gentlemen ever own a stone quarry?"

We told him that a stone quarry was among the few things we had never owned.

"I bought one six months ago, and it was a heavy investment. I do assure you. Again I hoped to make some money to recoup, as it were, after my losses. But fate was certainly against me."

"Why, what happened? Was the quarry—"

"Blasted," he whined, and we let him escape with his life.

The long-haired contributor knocked timidly at the door of the editor's room, says U-to-Date, and chuckled to himself when he heard a pleasant "Come in."

Hardly had he entered the office when the editor jumped up from his seat and grasping him warmly by the hands escorted him to a chair and begged to be shown a manuscript.

The visitor produced a greasy roll, and the editor read it eagerly. "It is sublime," he said, "simply sublime."

The contributor had expected to hear it was slime, because it was a poem on spring mud, but he retained his presence of mind sufficiently to ask,

"Will you accept it?"

"Will we except it?" said the editor.

"Well, I should say we would!" and he laid the manuscript on the desk, and putting his arm around the contributor's waist waltzed him around the desk three times to the tune of "City Life Has Changed Here."

At last they stopped, puffing for breath, and the editor, sitting down, reached for his check book and said,

"Will $50 do?"

"Yes," said the caller, "that will do."

The editor wrote out a check and just as he was about to sign it the contributor woke up.

EGGS FOR HATCHING.

A Remedy Suggested For the Annoyance of "No Hatch"

How many times do the readers of agricultural and poultry papers read the above words, and yet how many times have such readers been disappointed when they came to purchase some of the eggs so advertised? Eggs for hatching! The words imply that the primary purpose of the seller of such is to furnish eggs that, if properly incubated by an incubator, or better still, some good old hen, will produce a fair hatch for the purchaser in return for the money he has expended. But how many times have the words turned out to be a snare and a delusion? Nearly every person has an opinion of his or her own as to what is a fair hatch; some are satisfied with five, others with six or seven, while still another is not satisfied unless 10 or 12 are brought forth.

It is not the purpose of this article to suggest what is or what is not a fair hatch, but rather to suggest a remedy whereby at least one-half of a sitting of eggs ought to bring forth good healthy chicks. And in so doing let us start with the assumption that as far as the shipper, or seller, of the eggs is concerned, everything is perfectly square. As far as he is concerned the eggs are carefully collected, they are not chilled, are properly packed and arrive in good condition at their destination. That, if other things were equal, the purchaser would be satisfied. But in spite of all the pains of the breeder who furnishes and in spite of all the care of the party who buys them, no chicks appear at the end of 21 days; or if, by chance, one or two do appear, they soon die, being weakly and unable to stand any bad weather. What is the cause? Some will tell you the weather is not favorable—there is something in the atmosphere that prevents fertility; the breeding stock by constant laying has become weakened and unable to impart any strength to their offspring; and so on. Now, all of these reasons have more or less weight, but the great and primary trouble lies in two facts, first, a want of exercise and, second, an inability to reach food naturally required. The purpose of this article is to suggest a remedy.

No one will dispute the fact that a small, or even a large, flock of fowls that have a free, unobstructed range at all times of the day, during the months of April and May, will produce eggs nearly every one of which will bring forth a good, strong chicken that will live and come to maturity.

VETERANS OF THE WAR REPAID IN SUFFERING AND DISEASE.

For Over Twenty Years Mr. John Sherman Sought Release from the Tortures of Inflammatory Rheumatism. From the Prescott Journal.

There is no man in the township of Edwardsburg who is better known than Mr. John Sherman. He is one of the many Canadians who at the outbreak of the American rebellion, joined the army of the North, and to the exposures and hardships which he endured during that trying and perilous time, does he owe long years of suffering which he has since undergone. The writer remembers seeing Mr. Sherman a few years ago when he was so crippled with rheumatism that it was impossible for him to walk, and having heard that a cure had been effected, determined to investigate the matter for himself. When the reporter called at Mr. Sherman's home he found him in the yard handling an axe and chopping wood like a young man, and he found him also quite willing to relate his trying experience. "I have suffered with rheumatism for twenty years," said Mr. Sherman, "and I have doctored with four different doctors and yet I kept getting worse and worse. I was bent double with the pain in my back and both legs were so drawn up that I was unable to straighten them, and for four months when I wanted to move about I had to do so on my hands and knees. I tried many medicines but got no benefit and I had given up all hope of being able to walk again. One of my sons tried to persuade me to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but I refused to take any more medicine. At last one day my son brought home three boxes of the pills, and after they had been in the house for over two weeks, I at last consented to take them, but not because I thought they would do me any good. Before they were gone, however, I could feel that my back was getting stronger and I could straighten up. It required no further persuasion to get me to take the pills, and from that time on I began to get better, until now with the aid of a light cane, I can walk all over the farm, get in and out of a buggy, and do most of the chores round the house and barns. I feel twenty years younger, and I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the most wonderful medicine for rheumatism in the whole world. I began them only to please my son and it was a most agreeable surprise to me when I found my legs limber, and my back gaining new strength. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to the suffering rheumatics of the world.

An analysis shows that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of a grippé, palpitation of the heart, nervous prostration, all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

Or bring again the pleasure of past years,

But rather, when aware of your worth,
From full heart still unsatisfied ye sigh,

Rescue by an Equine Hero.

A graphic story is told of Surgeon-Captain Grey, one of the officers who served in Rhodesia. In the attack on Mashangombi's, the horses began to drop, and soon thirteen lay on the ground, and it looked as if the men would all be killed. Evidently Capt. Turner thought, for he virtually gave the order, "Suaue qui peut," telling every man to fight the best he could for his own hand. But, though the horses continued to fall, the men escaped. Dr. Grey, to use his own words, "led toward the way out under a raking fire at a gallop, and was closely followed by the troop," according to the St. James Budget. "Very soon, however, I fell from the saddle, struck with a bullet from an elephant gun, about 500 yards off. The bullet struck me on the top of the thigh, smashing the socket of the thigh bone, breaking a vein and otherwise wounding me. My horse was carried on at full speed with the rear guard, which rushed at desperate speed to clear the pocket-like entrance of the drift, where the natives were rallying in the hope of killing profusely. I looked up and saw two natives aiming at me at a distance of about forty feet. At the same moment I saw my horse come lumbering back from the drift. I suddenly stopped, and stood over my prostrate body, covering me from the firing, and at the same time making a peculiar noise through its nostrils. I thought it had been wounded, and that with pain, noise and confusion it had gone mad. This notion, however, was soon dispelled, for it continued to stand over me in a kneeling posture, and I could see that the faithful animal had come back to protect me. I may remark here that this horse, which I myself selected, I made a pet of. As the natives were now beginning to fly round me, and, thinking if I could reach my horse's back I would be shot, which was preferable to being assailed, I seized the reins, put my right foot in the stirrup, and made a supreme effort to mount. And I was successful, but how I did it I do not know, for my left side was entirely paralyzed. On finding myself in my saddle, I called "Go!", to my horse, which darted like an arrow toward the exit from the drift."

A Boon For Painters.

An association has opened some rooms in Lower Phillips place, Kensington, for the exhibition of costumes, which can be hired by artists who wish to paint any historical characters. The dresses seem to be made with great care, some of them being exact copies of dresses from old portraits. There is one pale yellow silk gown, a reproduction of the one worn by Anne of Cleves in her portrait by Holbein; another is the copy of a gown worn by Henrietta Maria. There are also many costumes not copied from pictures, but which are good specimens of the dress worn at different periods, with their hats, collars, hose and other garments all complete; indeed, we think an artist turned loose among so much brocade and embroidery, Greek drapery, Japanese satins, Georgian coats, mediaeval garments, etc., would be pretty sure to find something with which he could appropriately clothe his figures, and as the charge for hiring is very moderate, the association may be very useful to young painters who cannot afford to go to much expense for costumes.—English Builder.

will live and come to maturity. Why is this? Because they have plenty of exercise and procure green food and other things which they crave. As an instance, showing the benefits of a free range, take the case of the wild turkey or grouse. It is rare indeed when every egg in their nests is not hatched. The birds in their habits are without doubt closely allied to the barn yard hen when in their natural state. The facts being thus, it would seem that an intelligent breeder must at all times, but more especially in the winter and spring months, continually seek to keep his birds supplied with things which by nature they are accustomed to and crave. As the hen is more and more bred, she becomes domesticated, until at the present day it is almost as natural for her, if properly managed, to lay in winter as it is for her to lay in April or May, or, in other words, to lay in warm weather.

You can't expect, if you first begin to attend to these things the week before you set your hens, to have much better success than you would have if you had let them alone. But there must be a beginning some time, and at least a month before the incubating season is none too soon.

If the weather is still cold, and the ground covered with snow, so that the hens cannot have free range, do the next best thing. In each pen from which eggs for sitting are to be taken put in a lot of chaff, or, better still, dry leaves, or both. Put in a quantity so that they will cover the floor to a depth of at least a foot. This makes a good dry footing. In feeding with dry grain, scatter it broadcast among the leaves, and then let the birds do the rest. From the time she is fed until dark, and from daylight until she gets her morning meal, all her time will be taken up in scratching for the kernels of grain hidden among the leaves. In this way exercise is plenty and good health will be secured. If possible an open shed connected with the pens facing south is a most excellent adjunct, where the hens in pleasant weather may scratch and sun themselves. Having fed plenty of good food and pure water, or better still skimmed milk, you have done what the writer believes to be the best thing to procure fertile eggs.

Later in the season other schemes may be adopted, whereby the fowls may be furnished with all these things, in a different way. For instance, a small, water-tight coop large enough to hold a small flock at night, may be lightly constructed, so that it can be portable. Take the coop away from the buildings, and have it placed in some orchard or field, at a sufficient distance from the old quarters, so that they will not come back when liberated. Keep the flock confined for a few days, until they become accustomed to the new home, and then let the "biddies" out. They will forage for themselves and will pick up a good share of their living during the day, and return to their quarters to lay and roost. Several of these flocks may be put in different parts of the farm, at a sufficient distance to prevent fighting between the males. If this scheme is followed and breeder can, as far as the eggs are concerned, safely guarantee a good hatch; his hens will be healthy and strong and produce more eggs at a time when he most wants them. Of course, there are many who have not the room to carry out such a plan; they might be able to put out one flock, but could not put out several. To these I suggest enclosing a fair size grass plot with three feet nine netting, and I believe the result will be very satisfactory.

A man who purchases a sitting of eggs of a breeder and fails to get any chicks, especially if he is a stranger, will rarely give such a one another order, provided, of course, he is satisfied that the fault is in the eggs. And the purchaser is only too ready to put all the blame on the seller; he is confident the latter has either permitted the eggs to become chilled or has dipped them in hot water or something of that kind, forgetting that perhaps his own hen hasn't done her duty; or that the expressman has unnecessarily shaken the eggs or left them exposed to chilling winds, etc. I could not successfully contend that there are no frauds in the poultry business, just as there are in every walk of life, but, happily, they really are very few, indeed.—C. #### Whence?

I do not know, I seem a child at play Before the viewless mystery of life. And know not it is there; except at times

There comes to me a sense unnamable; The veil seems just a little drawn; I see An awful glimpse that shakes my inmost soul.

It may be but a look, a word, a face, A strain of music, or a laugh, a song, And all the world goes fading into dream.

I seem to feel all this has been before, A something of unutterable age, As old as life, aye, as old as death, That gazes through my eyes upon the world.

And brings a sense of loneliness, a gleam Of fearful knowledge, then it fades away.

It was more frequent in my early years, Before I clogged my soul with flesh and sin; But even yet it comes to me at times;

And once—I know not what the cause—it came, And in the frenzy burst from out my lips

The one involuntary cry, "I know." And then it left me, helpless as a child;

The dream died from me; and I went my way Into the world of toil and commonplace.

—J. Arthur Edgerton, in Open Court.

HE HAD PITY.

Jabez Wilson, whose 52 years of life had been passed in single blessedness, had little in common with the rest of the world.

His faults were many and his virtues few. His two redeeming points—call them virtues if you will—were generosity verging on weakness in individual cases and a love for music.

Late one light he came out of St. James' Hall, buttoned his coat up round his neck, dived his hands into his pockets and made for home. On his way he entered a cafe and took a cup of coffee.

He stopped short. What an idiot he was. Luigi was only flesh and blood, and young blood at that.

"Luigi," he began, after the silence of the moment, "is this girl of your a suitable partner to accompany you on your upward career through life? You will stand at the head of your art, and you will move in the highest circles of European society."

"She, whatever her post in life now, may be ill-suited to grace the drawing-room of the aristocracy, or to sit by your side in the carriage that draws you to your mansion."

ever on the alert for music, caught the sounds of a voice that was at once rich and melodious.

Jabez listened attentively for five minutes, during which time the song continued with short intervals of silence. At length it stopped altogether. Jabez asking the waiter attending to fetch in the person singing.

The waiter returned in less than a minute, ushering in a young man of a distinctly Italian cast of countenance, whom he introduced as Luigi the bottle washer.

"Well, my man, you have an extremely fine voice. Did you know that? With due care and rigid training there ought to be both fame and fortune in it. You would like to be something better than a bottle washer all your life, eh, my man?"

Luigi, in a wondering sort of way, nodded.

"That's right, that's right, my man. Here is my card. Come and see me at my house to-morrow at 6.30. I want to have a serious talk with you. Can you come?"

"Yes, sir—that is, no, sir. Not to-morrow. I work till 11 every night during the week."

"Oh, oh! such is the irony of fate," muttered Jabez. "Can you come on Sunday?"

"Yes, sir, I will come."

True to his word, Luigi, clothed in his Sunday garments, found himself in Mr. Wilson's drawing-room the following Sunday evening.

"Luigi, you have a most charming voice. It is, at present, in what I may term an embryo form. The foundation is there, in all its strength, and a couple of years' careful training will place you without a doubt as one of the topmost branches of the vocal tree."

"You must make a point of cultivating your voice on every possible occasion, Luigi. Avoid those articles of food which I shall give you a list of, that your vocal chords may retain the sweetness, strength and fullness that now mark them."

"Your clothes, too, are unsuited to the pupil of a vocal professor. You must fit yourself out like a gentleman, Luigi. You must exercise care, and take a pride in your personal appearance—in short, be in every respect worthy of your profession."

As Luigi's profession was that of bottle washer at an Italian restaurant, he naturally failed to see how he could well give further evidence of his occupation than by the suit in which he appeared before this strange gentleman. And he said so.

"Dear me; of course I must explain to you, Luigi, what I propose to do. I am too hasty. First and foremost, do you like music?"

"I am an Italian," was the modest reply.

"Grand. A most fitting answer. Now we will come to business. Would you like to give up your present menial occupation and become, first, the pupil of a musician, and then a master of the art you excel in?"

"That is beyond my hopes, sir. I have no money."

Jabez Wilson threw up his hands.

"That's all right. I will see to that little matter. Give me the assurance that you will put your whole heart into the work I have cut out for you, and will do your best. I ask for nothing more."

A few days later Luigi left his situation and became the protégé of Mr. Wilson. To say that Luigi was grateful would be to put the feeling he evinced toward his benefactor in very mild terms. He could find no way of expressing his gratitude beyond making himself as perfect in his art as it became possible for him to do.

"Luigi," said Mr. Wilson one day, "I am delighted to tell you that it is now beyond the capabilities of English masters to teach you further. It remains for the masters of your native land to instill into you that little required to take you to Naples, where we will spend the next year or two."

For the first time since their old acquaintance Luigi failed to hail an announcement for his benefit with any sign of pleasure or satisfaction. He looked gloomy and hesitated to speak. "You have always been extremely kind and good to me, Mr. Wilson."

and the winning faces of beautiful women."

"My kind benefactor, that is impossible. I shall always love Maggie as much as I do now."

Jabez Wilson sighed. It was a sad blow to his vanity and to his peace of mind.

"Think it over, lad," he began. "When the first pangs of grief at parting are passed, you will forget about your lowly girl in the whirlwind of your fame, and she will soon put you from her. Come to me to-morrow and let me know what you intend doing."

The next day Mr. Wilson received a visit from Maggie. She came in tears to beg his consent, his heart was touched at the sight of a woman in sorrow, and, revelling himself for a cold-blooded monster, he told her, in an outburst of generosity, to go and marry Luigi as many times as she liked.

After a twelvemonth spent in Italy Luigi became perfect. His first appearance in public was made as Gerardo, and, as he retreated behind the curtain that night, old Jabez Wilson waited to press his hands and tell him that his dream was at last realized.

Jabez Wilson walked out of his solicitor's office penniless. The bank of which he was principal shareholder had failed, and this, in conjunction with a few minor disasters, had robbed him of every penny he possessed.

He had never in his life done a stroke of work, and was not even capable of a clerical position.

The apartments he had occupied were given up; the club was never again to see him or hear what had become of him; the fine old wines in his cellar fetched sufficient to pay his long standing rent, with a surplus for a few weeks—that was all.

From his scanty store he drew a penny every day to search the papers for news of Luigi's success. He could not bring himself to write to him and to tell him everything. It was pleasant enough to know that the man whom he had dragged from obscurity should at that moment be making Europe vibrate with the splendor of his voice.

One night, as he crouched over the fire in the doss house he frequented, reading the paper, a short paragraph at the foot of a column caught his eye.

"Early yesterday morning the body of a woman was found in the Grand canal at Venice. She is said to be the wife of Sig. Luigi, the well-known singer, with whom she is supposed to have led a wretched life. There are no marks of violence on the body, and the authorities have passed a verdict of suicide while temporarily insane."

Jabez Wilson's forecast had been realized only too fully, and the broken-hearted man cried like a child.

A week later he stood outside the doss house with exactly a penny in his pocket.

He stood wondering what he should do, when his musical instincts, which had been crushed and lain dormant for so long, arose within him. He hurried along the street, entered a shop and purchased a tin whistle with his one remaining copper.

An hour later as he walked slowly along the middle of the road, his threadbare coat buttoned up around his neck, an old battered hat pressed tightly down over the straggling gray hair that blew in the cold wind, and his dry lips pressed against the whistle, he was playing "Home, Sweet Home"—that was all he knew.

In front of a resplendent hotel he stood and played, with one foot on the pavement. A tall, black-bearded gentleman, evidently a foreigner, wrapped in a priceless fur coat, came down the steps of the hotel, in company with a beautiful woman, in the full glare of the lamp.

Instinctively the instrument fell from the lips of the player, as he muttered, half aloud:

"Luigi!"

The Italian peered at the pale, pinched, upturned face.

"So you have come to this, eh?" he asked in a whisper, lest his companion should hear, at the same time drawing half a crown from his pocket, "my unfortunate friend."

He turned abruptly, half ashamed, when the woman by his side told him to come away from the beggar.

"I come, Mirand." Then as she took his arm and he handed her in a brougham, "I have pity for these poor musicians."—Pearson's Weekly.

COLONIAL FAD IN DRESS.

Last Century Decorations Are Now Much in Vogue.

Concerning the many features of last century dress decoration now in vogue a New York Mail and Express writer says:

A pretty hat is in outline a fairly copy of the fashionable gentleman's hat of the period just preceding the Revolution.

It has a flaring roll, more accentuated than the D'Orsay, a very wide brim and a small crown, slightly conical in character. The gentlemen of the olden time trimmed this with an edging to the brim, a band to the crown and a large rosette or bow upon the side.

The modern woman trims hers in the same style, but increases it by having one or two rosettes upon one side, two large bows on the other and a spray of plumes rising up behind the bows and falling in graceful curves upon the top of the crown.

One of the newest jackets is almost a duplicate of a coat worn by Beau Brummel. Like the skirt to which it belongs, it is made of handsome old-fashioned broadcloth. Instead of buttoning down the middle of the body the side is prolonged and buttons far over on the left, almost beneath the arm.

Here it is caught and fastened by two or three buttons, large, ornate and dazzling.

The lapel is so wide that it runs over to the shoulder. It is not separated by the customary slit from the rever and continues in graceful lines, curving first upward and then downward from the right shoulder to a point on the left side nearly below the arm.

It is still further edged, as are the cuffs, with a row of dark-colored and substantial decoration, this being velvet plush astrachan, lambs' wool, mink, sable, monkey, chinchilla, marten or otter.

The sleeves are moderately tight from the shoulder to the wrist, fitting very snugly the forearm. The ends are turned back into gauntlet cuffs. On the shoulder the material is puffed so as to give the breadth created by the balloon sleeve without the heavy and cumbersome effect to the upper arm.

Instead of a belt there is a girle of black velvet or of fur. The space under the chin is filled with an immense bow of chiffon, lace and ribbons caught in the centre by a brilliant old-fashioned Dutch or Flemish clasp.

Even more patriotic are a number of designs in blue and buff. The numerous new shades in these two colors enable an artistic modiste to make at least ten combinations which are satisfactory so far as contrast is concerned.

In making these combinations grayish or brownish tints are avoided and clear tints are preferred. Of the buffs those which run toward the reddish yellow are preferred to the brownish yellow series, and of the blues the ultramarine, sapphire and persian blues are the favorites.

By the combining of bright sapphire with a clear reddish buff a very satisfactory and artistic combination is produced.

The colonial idea is followed by using blue for the material and buff for the lining, trimming and decoration. The combination looks very well upon a waist like the one described, upon a gentleman's riding habit of the last century, of which the waists worn to-day for street costumes and upon many of the coat waists and jacket waists which are now so much in evidence.

One charm of these colonial coats and jackets is their warmth and comly child. It rests with every woman whether her baby shall be healthy and happy, or puny and miserable. If during the period preceding maternity a woman takes proper care of the organs upon which the perpetuation of the race depends, she insures the health of herself and child. It is easy to do this. The proper medicine is at hand. Over 3,000 women have testified in writing to the value of

The organs that make motherhood and motherhood possible are directly affected upon by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes them strong and healthy. It cures all weakness and disease. It prepares for maternity. It does away with the discomforts of the expectant period. It insures baby's health and makes labor easy and almost painless. It is sold more of the "Favorite Prescription" than of all other similar medicines combined.

"I am anxious to add my testimonial to your 'Favorite Prescription,'" writes Mrs. C. G. Brandon, of Fort Grant, Graham Co., Ariz. "I had been using this Prescription for several months previous to my confinement, and I am sure I have benefited greatly from the time I commenced to use it. I feel fully as well as ever I did in my life. Up to the very day when the baby was born I did all my own housework; and during confinement I had not the least symptoms of fever. The 'ordal' was nothing to what I expected."

The woman who owns a copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser probably does not realize at once all that she gave in exchange for it. There was the price of $1.50. That paid for the large volume of 1,008 pages. Then, as day by day she looked into these pages, one by one she gave away her anxieties for her family's health. She learned how to make her children well. In the chapters especially treating of her own weaknesses, she learned the causes and the cures. 680,000 copies have been sold at $1.50 each. Now an edition in paper covers, will be distributed FREE. Send 31 one-cent stamps to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., to cover the cost of customs and mailing only. ## HOW HE LOST HER.

Mr. Hanford's Unpardonable Solecism at His Fiancee's Home.

"No, George," said Miss Melton, after the old folks had withdrawn from the parlor and left the lovers alone, "I am sorry that I cannot be yours. It breaks my heart, but something has occurred to-day that I can never forgive, and even if I could do so I know that mother would be unwilling to overlook it."

Mr. Hanford, says the Cleveland Leader, had but recently become engaged to the beautiful Agnes Melton, and her parents had invited him to dinner that day for the purpose of introducing him to some of their near relatives. Glad indeed he had been to accept their hospitality, for the fare at the boarding-house was not of the best, and he had within a few months dwindled down into the welter-weight class, though he had begun at 160 pounds, stripped.

For a moment after his sweetheart ceased speaking the young man sat as if dazed and gazed at her in helpless amazement. When he could command his voice he asked:

"Is this some cruel trick? Dearest, do not keep me in suspense. In my present debilitated condition it might be fatal."

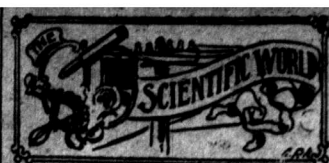

"Alas!" she replied, "I never was more in earnest. We must henceforth pursue diverging ways."

She had recently graduated from the Women's College and could hurl solid chunks of English with a force that was indeed hard on the teeth of an opponent.

"And you say, as you said, that this sudden determination upon your part is due to something that has occurred to-day?"

"Yes—something that you did at the table."

The perturbed lover permitted his thoughts to revolve backward. What

FOOTPRINTS OF PROGRESS.

The Cream of the News of Discovery and Research.

Aluminum is found to withstand the influence of organic secretions better than silver, and is being largely employed for dental plates and surgical instruments, and in places where subjected to corrosion.

Aluminum is little acted upon by mineral waters, and withstands the action of sea water better than iron, steel or copper.

The experimental minor coins of aluminum alloy have been struck at the Philadelphia Mint, and have been sent to the Department at Washington for the use of the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures.

Aluminum violins are said to have a richer tone than those made of wood, and the inventor says that he has found in aluminum a latent property, consisting of a tendency of the fundamental to outweigh the upper partial tones. The manufacturer states that for this reason means are employed to introduce and regulate the partial tones to suit the taste of the individual player. Notwithstanding the strong popular feeling for wooden instruments, aluminum instruments are steadily gaining their way in musical circles, and even Ysaye, the eminent violinist, has spoken highly of the aluminum violin.

Aluminum yacht blocks have been tried in service for over a year, and have given very satisfactory results. These blocks stand the strain very well, and save considerable weight in blocks used aloft, where lightness is a great desideratum. In actual tests aluminum blocks have shown remarkable strength, a block weighing about three ounces has stood a test of 700 pounds, and one weighing eight ounces a test of 1000 pounds; while an 18-ounce block has stood a strain of 1600 pounds.

Aluminum combs being so light make excellent pocket combs and are very durable. Moreover, their non-corrosive properties allow of their being carried for a long time without apparent signs of wear.

The Arctic explorer Nansen used aluminum utensils in his last expedition in quest of the North pole, and he found that aluminum ware where he journeyed afoot, thousands of miles over the frozen sea.

Still another use of aluminum is in the manufacture of megaphones, for long-distance speaking, where its lightness is of great value.

No Ruby Light Required.

Those who are away from home and who have not a ruby lamp and yet wish to develop plates may do so with very little trouble. The best way is to place a candle under a table or washstand and develop the plates on top of this. The darker in color the walls of the room are the better. The plate to be developed should be quickly placed in a dish and covered with the developer; the dish should then be immediately covered with another of the same size. This may be raised for a second or two at intervals, and the plate can in this way be very satisfactorily developed. Special rapid plates developed in this way showed no tendency to fog.

HALF-BREED FELINE.

AN ANIMAL WONDER FOR NEW YORK CENTRAL PARK ZOO.

An Experiment That Will Be Interesting to All Naturalists—Historical Data Appertaining to the Past Hybrids of This Class.

Half lion, half tiger. There is a royal beast for you; a doubled and quadrupled embodiment of all the strength, agility, craft and bloodthirstiness that ever walked upon four feet.

That is the sort of quadruped that Superintendent Smith of the Central Park Zoological Gardens, is being urged now to secure and keep on exhibition for the amazement and delight of the thousands who visit his interesting balliwick, says the Journal.

In all the animal kingdom there is not, nor could there be produced, a beast about the grailings of whose cage men, women and children would linger with deeper interest or greater awe. Such an animal does not, so far as zoological experts have knowledge, exist at the present time. There certainly is none in captivity, and so closely have these heads of the cat tribe followed the law governing the selection of species, that no knowledge can be had by explorers, in either Asia, or Africa, of any wild animal which seems to have been the offspring of such cross-breeding.

Superintendent Smith hesitates. He says that experimentalism is not included in the Central Park garden's code. There has been little or no effect there at producing new varieties of animals.

The history of the crossing of the lion and tiger breeds bears out what is found by the production of hybrids in other branches of the cat family; to wit, that half-breed felines, unlike hybrids of many other orders, show no sign of degeneration. In strength and in beauty of form and color, the half-bred lion-tiger has been found an improvement upon both his progenitors, but, strange to say, the savage and bloodthirsty instincts of the parents seem to have vanished in the cross.

Since this matter of securing a lion-tiger for the New York Zoo has been under discussion, the historical data appertaining to it have been brought to Superintendent Smith's notice. A few

The Old-Fashioned High Tea.

The table for a "high tea" is usually arranged without a tablecloth, particularly if the hostess happens to possess a handsome table. At each place should be a plate dolly and a tumbler dolly; in the centre of the table an embroidered centrepiece in colors in harmony with the table decorations and the flowers it is intended to use. At the head of the table upon an embroidered square are laid the tea service, the urn, the cups and saucers, the cream-pitcher, sugar-bowl, etc. At the other end upon another embroidered square may be placed the piece de resistance of the "high tea." Scattered about on circular dollies are the dishes of jelly, preserves, pickles, sweet and sour, olives, butter balls, cakes, etc. At each place, resting upon the plate dolly, should be a pretty plate and a necessary silver, a goblet, a bread-and-butter-plate and a salt-cellar. All the cold dishes are placed upon the table before the meal is announced, and the hot ones served immediately upon the guests being seated. Broiled chicken and waffles, fried oysters and hot biscuit, scalloped oysters, creamed oysters, broiled oysters and creamed chicken are always in order. Hot buttered and hot dry toast belong properly to the "high tea," as do chicken and lobster salad. The tea and coffee are served with the meal. Generally the sweet portion consists merely of cake, jelly and preserves. Ice cream is sometimes served, and whipped cream or charlotte russe. Thin slices of white and brown bread carefully buttered make a welcome addition to the menu.—January Ladies' Home Journal.

The Baby's Christening Robe.

"The christening robe is usually of the finest mull and trimmed with real Valenciennes lace edging, but one of fine nainsook with hemstitched hem, front of machine-made Valenciennes insertion and nainsook embroidery, yoke to correspond, makes a very dainty and serviceable affair," writes Emma M. Hooper in a practical article on "The Baby's Layette," in the January Ladies' Home Journal. "It may be made as follows: Take two lengths of fine lawn, thirty-six inches wide, costing about fifty cents a yard; have a three-inch hem hemstitched and a ruffle of three-inch Valenciennes lace; whip this to the lower edge. Gather to a short square yoke, opening it in the back. The yoke should be made of stripes of lace insertion and nainsook embroidery and edged with a ruffle of lace, the neck being finished with a ruffle of narrower lace. Cover the front with alternate crosswise rows of lace and embroidery insertion, commencing them at the hem twenty inches wide and tapering toward the top to a width of six inches; a ruffle of lace down each side. One seam sleeves gathered in to the armholes and at the wrists, where there is a band of insertion and ruffle lace. Of three-inch lace eight yards, of narrow edging half a yard, and of lace and nainsook insertion six yards of each. One yard from the neck to the lower edge is amply long for a dress, many being only thirty-three inches, as it has been decided unhealthy for the baby to be burdened with any extra weight."

He Takes the Prize.

"You're mistaken in saying that Tightly is the meanest man in the state."

"No, I'm not. He hired me for a year as a conductor on that electric railroad of his at starvation wages, and then made me pay full fare every trip."

Wouldn't Work Both Ways.

What is good for one is not always good for another, says Harper's Round Table. This is illustrated in a short tale told some time ago about a French medical student. While in London on a visit, the student lodged in the house with a man very sick with fever, who was continually besieged by his nurse to drink very nauseating liquids which were lukewarm. The sick man found this almost impossible to do, until one day he whispered to his nurse:

"Bring me a salt herring, and I will drink as much as you please."

The woman indulged in his request; he ate the herring, drank the liquids, underwent the required perspiration and recovered.

The French student, thinking this very clever, inserted in his journal: "Salt herring cures an Englishman of fever."

On his return to France he prescribed the same remedy to his first patient with a fever. The patient died. On which he inserted in his journal: "N. B.—A salt herring cures an Englishman of what fearful blunder of speech had he made? He had called for only three different supplies of turkey, so that could not, of course, have quered him. He remembered distinctly that he had eaten his soup out of the side of the spoon, and that he had used his napkin after every mouthful. But, stay! How about the clives? No, they were not at fault, for he had the stones in his vest pocket. What, then, was the dreadful thing that had happened? He thought of everything he had said, and could remember no word that he would care to have unspoken. The mystery was beyond his ken, and at length, in trembling, eager tones, he again asked the lovely girl to relieve him of his dreadful suspense."

Slowly and deliberately she replied: "The first thing you did when you sat down was to take your plate and wipe it off with a corner of the tablecloth. This is not a boarding house or a hotel, sir! The insult can never be atoned for. Please be sure that you get the right hat and overcoat as you pass out."

"Curse the night hat and overcoat!" he muttered, and a moment later the lower lights in the Melton mansion were extinguished.

The Best Make.

"What are you talking about?" said Sprocket, contemptuously. "In the first place, mine is at least half an ounce lighter than yours, and yet is better fitted for heavy roads."

"Rubbish!" retorted Teecel. "Gearing to the same pitch as yours, I can get twice the speed out of mine with less than half the work."

"That is not true. But even if it were, with one tire busted, where would you be? I can repair both of mine in 1 minute, 37 seconds."

"So could I. But I never had to. Mine won't bust, any way."

"You never took yours where you are liable to. You don't dare to. The slightest jolting would throw yours right out of balance."

"Balance! What do you know about balance? Why, I can take mine, turn it upside down, and—"

"Excuse me," said the stranger, who had been looking on, "but might I ask you gentlemen what the trouble is?"

"Well," said Sprocket, "I am trying to show this idiot the superiority of my wheel over his."

"Which the blamed fool cannot do," returned Teecel, "for the reason that—"

"Gentlemen, gentlemen," interrupted the stranger, raising his hand; "in order to settle this little difficulty what would you say if I were to show you a wheel that beats both of yours into fits?"

"You can't do it," said both the combatants at once. "Wait a minute; yes I can. I can produce before you a wheel that is absolutely perfect in every way; one that never requires cleaning, yet is always bright; one that you can travel further on, if you know how, than anything else in the world; one that everybody recognizes as the best as soon as they see it; one that you know how to use as soon as you get it; one that, when it gets old and worn, can always be changed for a new one without any discount."

"What make?" yelled Sprocket and Teecel in a breath.

"Well, they make them in Philadelphia, Washington and San Francisco."

"The name of it," roared both bicyclists, trembling with agitation.

"There is no particular name to it," replied the stranger, "unless you call it—but, here, gentlemen, I'll show it to you. The greatest wheel in the world. Known as the cartwheel!"

And he took from his pocket a brand new silver dollar.—New York Journal.

To Prevent Frilling.

Dr. E. Vogel, writing in the Mitten-ungen, says that formalin is a perfectly satisfactory preventive of such frilling as occurs during the washing of negatives. Immediately the plate is taken from the fixing bath, and before even rinsing, it is immersed in a mixture of one volume of Schering's formalin and twenty volumes of water and allowed to remain for five or ten minutes. After this it has no tendency to frill. The formalin bath should be kept in the dark, as light tends to change the formaldehyde into insoluble para-aldehyde, and the bath becomes inoperative.

Municipal Control of Electric and Water Energy.

The Baltimore Electrical Commission has submitted its report to the Mayor favoring the construction of a system of electrical subways, to be owned by the city and rented to the various electrical companies. The report is a most elaborate one and reflects great credit upon the commission and its engineer, Nicholas S. Hill, Jr. Coincident with the appearance of this report is the decision of the Maryland Court of Appeals denying the suit of the Baltimore Edison Company, which claimed that it had a right to build electrical subways without a franchise from the city. As the people at the last election voted in favor of the construction of an electrical subway system by the city, says the Engineering News, the decision is an important one.

Municipal ownership of electrical subways in Erie, Pa., has been recommended by a committee of the Select Council, and the recommendation has been adopted. The system is yet to be constructed.

Municipal ownership of water works at Des Moines, Iowa, has been in contemplation for some time. The city recently offered the Des Moines Water Works Company $800,000 for its plant. The offer not having been accepted, the City Council has instructed the City Engineer and the Board of Public Works to submit plans and specifications for a new plant.

Municipal ownership of street railways is in force at Dover, England, and that city is now advertising for bids for the material and construction of three miles of line. The work will be under the supervision of the Borough Engineer.

nagerie then very well known in Great Britain. The sire, in the first instance, was a lion bred in the menagerie, the mother a tigress imported from India.

For a period of nearly two years the animals were kept in proximity, but there was no issue until October 17, 1824, when the tigress bore her first litter of six cubs. The menagerie was in London, and the new arrivals became the talk of the town, though there were not so many newspapers then to herald their advent and publish their pictures.

The next litter, of two cubs, Sir William Jardine, an eminent zoological authority, says, were born in December—Christmas Day—1827. They only lived ten months, and Mr. Atkins had their skins stuffed and mounted and presented them to the British Museum, where to this day, it is said, they may be seen.

There was, it was asserted by Atkins, no domestic infelicity between lion fathers and tiger mothers, and, in hope of establishing the cross as a distinct animal, he continued his experiments. Dr. Gunther of the British Museum, purchased two of the next litter of cubs, when they were only a few days old. They were, he wrote in his records, of a peculiarly yellow color, with indistinct markings. There were slight waves of darker color on the back, and the limbs and tail were banded with black. Sir William Jardine says of them: "The general color was not so bright as that of the tiger, and the transverse bands were more obscure."

Professor Griffiths, another well grounded authority connected with the London Zoo, wrote: "Our cubs, in common with ordinary lions, were born without traces of a mane, or of a tuft at the end of the tail. Their fur in general was rather inclined to be woolly. The exterior ear was pendant at the extremity. The nails were constantly out and not eased in the sheath, and in these particulars they agreed with the common cubs of lions."

"Their color was a tawny yellow, but from the nose over the head along the back and the upper side of the tail, the color was much darker, and on these parts the transverse stripes were stronger, and the forehead was covered with obscure spots, slighter indications of which also appeared on other parts of the body. The shape of the head is assimilated to that of the lion; its superfluency, on the other hand, to that of the tigress."

In 1832 another travelling showman named Austin, secured a number of cubs from a Barbary lion and a Bengal tigress. They attracted so much attention that the Queen, then Princess Victoria, and George IV., went to see them.

All these cubs, save one male and one female, died on account of over-feeding. The male lived to be ten years of age and grew to be an immense beast, the pride of the Liverpool gardens. His hide was stuffed and is now on exhibition in the Cambridge Museum.

A Motor For High Speed.

At least one large firm manufacturing dynamos and motors is, says the American Engineer, at work upon a motor that will run at a speed of 10,000 revolutions per minute. This motor, if it can be successfully constructed, will be used by the United States Government on men-of-war to start the propelling machinery of Howell torpedoes just before they are fired from their tubes. This torpedo is propelled by the energy stored in a small fly-wheel inside of it, made to revolve at a speed of 10,000 revolutions, and at present a steam turbine is the only motor of simple form that is available to rotate the fly-wheel at that speed.

Bad Weather For Tramps.

A Public Meeting.

The Mayor has called a public meeting to be held at the town hall on Tuesday evening next to discuss plans for sending assistance to the famine and plague stricken natives of India. As India is a part of the British possessions we hope our citizens will show their loyalty and charity by contributing handsomely towards alleviating the sufferings of her majesty's subjects in that far distant land. When it is stated that $1 will suffice to keep one of the sufferers alive for a month, any contribution however small will be acceptable and valuable.

For Sweet Charity's Sake.

The agitation set on foot over a year ago to have the dispensation of charity placed in the hands of a central committee selected from the town council and the various churches has again been revived. Under the present system, it is said, the various charitable organizations are working to a disadvantage and many people are receiving help twice over. If the various charitable organizations and the Poor and Sanitary Committee would exchange lists we believe it would lead to a more equitable distribution of their funds. The plan proposed by Mr. Hooper at the town council on Monday evening is a good one providing it can be proved practicable. Its worthy of a fair trial at any rate.

N. H. S. Literary Society:

The N. H. S. Literary entertainment which is held every two weeks met last Friday. We must show how the reputation of our school holds its own with any around. Our diplomatic career has given abundant opportunity to observe the qualities that are possessed by the pupils. Our school possesses the art of elegance in dress among the fair sex. The first business was the reading of minutes of last meeting by the secretary. Then comes the debate. "Resolved that Walpole was a greater statesman than Pitt. Affirmative. Mr. H. McKim, Miss T. Husband, Mr. H. Ryan. Negative. Mr. W. Gibson. Miss M. O'Mara, Mr. H. Nesbit. The President called upon the leader of affirmative. Mr. H. McKim, who after a short but expressive speech retired to his seat. Then the leader of Negative, Mr. Gibson, took the floor. By this young gentleman's address, one can see that talent is behind it all. Mr. Gibson after a few remarks retired to his seat. The remaining speakers showed that in future years they will come to the front as public speakers.

The leaders then spoke expressing themselves and showing where one another were wrong and right. The committee on the debate retired for a short time. Speech by Rev. White. The decision given by committee resulted in favor of negative by a slight figure. The school was filled with fair sex of town. We would like all who have the time to come and enjoy an afternoon with us. All welcome next literary Friday 12th, Feb. Entertainment closed with God save the Queen.

The people in this district have been falling over one another in their eagerness to buy ten cent shares in British Columbia gold mines, while right at their doors is a district fully as rich in the yellow metal. #### Lennox and Addington is Good Enough.

The dropping of the name Lennox from the county and the proposal to have the Legislature change it to Addington alone advocated by Mr. Reid, M.P.P., at the last session of the County Council was not very well received. The members would not consent to part with the good old name, "Lennox." Mr. Symington said we might drop part of each name and call it Adlox for instance. If this wouldn't do they might call it Lennington and he wouldn't have any objection to calling it Symington. Our County Council gave the local member a gentle intimation not to monkey with the name.

A Sudden Death.

It is with feelings of deep regret we are called upon to chronicle the sudden death of an old and highly esteemed resident of this district in the person of Mr. Lewis F. Doller, who passed away at his residence in North Fredericksburg on Sunday morning. Deceased, who had been ailing for some time, was in Nananee on Saturday and felt in much better health than usual. He passed a quiet night on Saturday and rested well. He awoke about 6 o'clock on Sunday morning and conversed with his wife for about an hour and a half. Mrs. Doller had just arisen, when her husband turned on his side folded his arms and was gone instantly. He died without a struggle his death being due to heart disease. Deceased was the second son of the late Charles Doller who was one of the pioneers of this country. Mr. Doller's father was a native of Germany and one of the levies in the army of Napoleon Bonaparte. He was engaged in many of the important battles of that time and was finally taken prisoner by the British army in the peninsula, but rather than remain in prison he volunteered to fight the King's battles. He was enrolled as a member of De Watville's famous regiment and was at Lundy's Lane, Queenston Heights, Fort Erie and the capture of Oswego. He was honorably discharged in 1816. Although he was allowed a grant for his services he never drew it. He died in 1856 at the age of 73 years. His wife, Sarah Tyndale Doller, died in 1879 at the ripe old age of 82 years. Lewis F. Doller was born in Ernestown on the 28th of Dec. 1820, and was therefore 76 years and 1 month of age. He married Catherine daughter of the late Andrew Dunbar, on the 14th of November 1866. The union was a happy one and the bereaved wife will have the sympathy of all in her hour of deep affliction. Besides his widow he leaves three daughters, Mrs. Geo. McKim, of Watertown, Mrs. Garrison and Mrs. Wellington Loyst and one son, Albert. His eldest son, Edwin, preceded him to the grave thirteen years ago, 4th, Feb. 1884 and two daughters died in infancy. He leaves three brothers, Charles, Nelson, all residents of town, and one sister, Mrs. Samuel Bell. He was a kind father, an indulgent husband and respected and esteemed by all who knew him as was evidenced by the large concourse of people who assembled at his funeral on Tuesday, the White church morven, being crowded to its utmost capacity. In politics Mr. Doller was a staunch reformer. He was a well read intelligent man and one with whom it was a pleasure to converse. He was a steadfast member of the Methodist church and a consistent christian.

Missionary Services.

Organ Recital.

The organ recital to be given under the auspices of the Presbyterian church on Monday evening, Feb. 8th, promises to be one of the best entertainments held in Nananee in some time. It will mark the introduction of the new pipe organ placed in the Presbyterian church last week, which both in finish, volume and tone is said to be one of the best of its kind in the Province. Prof. Edgar R. Doward, of Toronto, formerly of Kingston and well-known to the people of Nananee has been secured at great expense to give the recital and he will be assisted by the best local talent. Mr. Doward takes rank as one of the foremost musicians in Canada and the press and the critics are loud in praise of his fine work. Don't miss this rare treat. Admission 25 cents.

Death of Thomas Flynn.

Thomas Flynn died of senile debility, at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. Granger, near Nananee Mills, on Feb. 2nd 1897, aged 92 years. Deceased came to Canada from Dublin, Ireland, about 1844, settling in Kingston city where he remained until 1865 when he moved to Nananee, residing here until eight or ten years ago. Through failing eyesight he was forced to give up business. He retired to the home of his daughter, where he has resided ever since. Mr. Flynn held many prominent positions being crown land inspector at one time. He was for years provincial lecturer of the Grand Lodge of I. O. of G. T. with a powerful retentive mind and great intelligence, he filled the latter office with great credit to the order. Of a genial and hospitable nature he won many friends. Mr. Flynn leaves four sons and two daughters, Robt. and Gill of Olden, Wm. of Detroit, Henry, of Toronto, Mrs. A. Irish of Kingston, Mrs. Granger, of Camden. An adherent of the Methodist church, he was regular in attendance at the house of the Lord while his health permitted. The funeral was held on Thursday 4th, inst, after which the remains were conveyed to Cataract for interment.

Levi Kelly will spend the balance of the cold weather in that warm and commodious castle presided over by governor VanLoven. Levi took a little recreation in the pugilistic line recently and the magistrate gave him two months in jail.

Their First Defeat.

The Printers Hockey Club met with their first defeat on Tuesday evening. It was their first game and this may, or may not, account for its being their first defeat.
A number of good and unanswerable reasons might be given why the Typos didn't win, but their failure to score sufficient goals, or their inability to prevent the opposing side from scoring too many may be mentioned as the chief reasons leading up to their Waterloo. The aggregation they ran up against on Tuesday was selected from the Boarders of the Paisley House and they succeeded in trimming the redoubtable heroes of the diamond to the commissioner for Ernestown, received a crack on the shin with the puck during the progress of the game. Mr. Amey is of the opinion that the puck is made of iron not rubber.

Referee—Geo. Harrison.

In the first half the Printers had all the best of it and when the whistle blew the score stood 2 to 1 in their favor. If they had stopped at that they would have been all right but unfortunately they played the second half and were beaten 5 to 2, the superior training and wind of the boarders standing them in good stead. Although almost every player bore some memento of the match in the way of a cut or bruise it was, nevertheless, one of the most pleasant and harmonious games of the season. Durand and Londeborough did the scoring for the boarders while Ham and Root did the needful for the printers. The return match will be played shortly.

In the Realms of Sport.

One of the swiftest and cleanest games of hockey played here this winter took place at the curling and skating rink last Friday evening between the Rockwoods, of Kingston, and the Napanee team. In response to referee Vanalstine's whistle the teams lined up at 8 p.m. as follows:

NAPANEE. ROCKWOOD.
M. Normile, goal. J. O'Shea.
F. S. Rockwell, point. W. Hamilton.
F. S. Rockwell, cover point. C. Clarke.
W. Rockwell, forwards. Coxworthy.
Geo. Harrison, forwards. Gilmore.
W. Carson, forwards. Talley.
Thos. Bald, forwards. W. Waller.
Jno. Ham, goal umpire. W. Waller.
Referee: E. Vanalstine, Napanee.

The game from start to finish was close and exciting and both in weight and combination play the teams were very evenly matched. Rockwoods scored the first goal a few minutes after play commenced and Napanee followed suit shortly afterwards. From this time out the crowd was kept in continual suspense as the forwards of both sides had a peculiar penchant for rushing the puck down upon each others goals. Napanee's defence had lots of work mapped out for them but they acquitted themselves creditably. Mike Normile in goal proved a tower of strength and stopped several red hot ones. Shortly before half time Napanee scored again, leaving matters 2 to 1 in their favor at half time. On the resume of play a lively pace was struck and maintained throughout the game. The puck went dancing up and down the ice at a great rate and it was anybody's game until time was call. In the second half each side scored 3 goals, the game resulting in a victory for Napanee by 5 goals to 4. The game throughout was clean and brilliant although at times some heavy checking was indulged in. Thos. Bald who started in at cover point and was eventually moved up forward proved a decided acquisition and will strengthen the team materially in their future matches. Harrison and W. Rockwell put up a star game on the forward line and Ferd Rockwell played his old reliable game at cover. This game leaves the Rockwoods and Napanee a tie, each having a game to their credit. An effort is being made to arrange another match between the teams.

NOTES OF SPORT.

The Sons of Rest, Napanee, have challenged the Nevversweats, of Picton, to a game of hockey. This will be one of the best matches of the season and will be looked forward to with great interest. The Executive Committee of the Bay of Quinte Hockey Club met at Belleville on Tuesday night. Mr. William Ponton attended as a delegate from Napanee. The protest of the Belleville team against the Trenton match was considered and when the manager of that team saw the feeling of the committee he withdrew it before it went to a vote. It was the feeling of the committee that Belleville had no grounds on which to base a protest and Belleville owes Mr. F. S. Rockwell an apology for their contemptible treatment towards him. Napanee's protest was not entertained as they did not enter it within twenty-four hours after the game.

The members of the County Council attended the Napanee-Rockwood match on Friday night. They were all greatly taken with the game. Mr. James Counterfeit half-dollars bearing the date "1870" are in circulation. They are considerably lighter than the genuine piece and if the edge is rubbed across the palm of the hand a heavy black line is left, showing that lead enters largely into the composition of the counterfeits.

On the 13th of December last two ties were placed on the rails just west of Marysville. A freight train struck them causing damage to the engine. The detective was placed on the case and Barnhart's arrest followed. He is now in Belleville gaol awaiting trial.

Providence, like the devil gets more than its proper share of credit for the evils that are in the world. Laziness, folly, bad management and incapacity are the sins for whose results Providence is too often held responsible. A man neglects his business for the race-track and his home for a gaming table or saloon, and when the red flag is hoisted over his door we hear a lot of twaddle about his being "unfortunate" in business. He trusts to others to run his store and neglects to give his business proper personal attention, and when the sheriff is in possession he sighs about the "mysteries of Providence." This wretched, contemptible lie that makes the Creator responsible for chumpheadedness and boozing leads to be nailed to the counter.—E.
